culture popular that emerged in the 1940s, especially in the United States. In general, the "pin-up" culture, which involves the creation and appreciation of idealized portraits of women who are frequently positioned in a seductive or glamorous way

Originally, the "pin-up" images were created to be viewed on posters or walls in a way that could be

Some of the most famous women associated with the "pin-up" style include Betty Grable, Marilyn Monroe and Betty Page. These women became sexual symbols or inspiration for many other artists/designers. Although the "pin-up" style has historically been associated with femininity and glamour, it has also been criticized for reinforcing stereotypical or limited expectations for women. The relationship between the "pin-up" style and women continues to be a source of inspiration for many artists/designers, but it also remains a subculture (still in existence). When a TV show or movie is produced, the
